Subject: Remedies flawed

To whom it may concern;

I believe the remedies are flawed for two reasons:

- 1) They do not adequately ensure that Microsoft will follow industry standards. As shown in the Findings of Fact, Microsoft has repeatedly subverted standards to their benefit with significant damage to their competitors.
- 2) They do not adequately penalize Microsoft for their actions over the past 15 years. I recognize that given the temporal nature of software it is very difficult to determine actual damage to competitors and their shareholders, but am convinced that Microsoft will only change their actions if it affects their bottom line. I would have expected some attempt to determine actual damages and punitive damages. Somehow Microsoft needs to come out of this suit less well off than if they hadn't done the anti-competitive actions in the first place.
